THE following somewhat suggestive Imperial decree is published in the Peking Gazette December 26th :- Wa have received the commands of H.I.M. the Empress-Dowager and now promulgate the following edict :- Our dynasty ever since its establish ment has always been very careful in maintaining strict discipline within the Palace and especially is strict supervision kept over the various members of the Imperial harem none being allowed to interfere in any way whatever in affairs of state or in the government of the empire. Her Mejesty, however, finds that' the Imperial concubines Ching Fet and Chen; Fel, taking advantage of the proximity to the Imperial presence have been trying to use their influence with us in state matters and repeatedly asking for favours on behalf of their relations and friends, conduct, which if allowed to pass unnoticed, will surely be productive of dangerous results in the future. Although on account of their general good behaviour Chilog Fel and Chen Fel have been gradually promoted until they are Imperial concubines of the 3rd 6-Solo ("Then shall the) rank, still, in order to prevent others from following this daugerous precedent, some penalty must be forthcoming. We command therefore that the said concubines be forthwith degraded two steps as a slight punishment and warning to the rest of the harem.

Mr. Okoshi first dwelt on the commerce between Ispan and Kores. He remarked that there are at present three open ports in Korea-Fosen, Chemulno, and Worsen-at all of which The list of New Year's honors conferred by piaces foreign commerce is fir from active. Chemalpo is at the head of the three, the aggregate value of its commerce amounting to shout 5 million yes a year. opening of Treaty Ports in Kores being chiefly due to the instrumentality of Japan, Tanantae merchants ought to e-joy the greatest influence in the Korean market ; but that was only the case for about a decade, after which the upper hand and in the end the relative nositions of the two were completely reversed. the amount of about 1,300,000 year a year against 700 oco yes sold by the Chinese, In 1804, however, the Chinese managed to sell more than I though yes worth, while the Japanese only sold to the value of $00,000 ven. Mr. Okoshi attributes this commercial defeat sustained by the Ispatere to two esquees, namely, want of combination on the part of Japanese merchants, and the round-bout way in which goods are shipped to Kores. The cooperative power of the Chinese is very market. They trender mutual help by accompdating each other with charp money, a thing that the Ispanese merchants have never attempted trouble and expense of having cotton cloths to be held on the spot; on brought first to Nagasaki and re-shipped thence to Koren. At present the Korenn market is virturily monopolized by the Taranese, their commercial antagonists baving returned to Chine. It must not however, be supposed that we shall be allowed to enfoy this position for long unobbosed by the Chinese, said Mr. Okoshi. The latter are sure to return sooner or they will strive to regain their influence. It is therefore of preent moressity that measures be devised to ensure the further enjoy. ment of the advantages now hald by Japan le Korea. The lecturer made seven suggestion as

> . 1st. Inaugurating the system of advances on woods a'd an chideavour to make cheap money and, The firm establishment of oprdial relations between Japanese merchants small his transactions, imports directly from home. This state of affairs should be changed. 5th, The extension of commerce into the interior of Korea 6'h, The direct Importation of goods from Shanghal. 7 h. The increase of facilities for shipment and cheapening of freight.

Mr. Okoshi considers that by attending to the above prints great/improvement may be effected in Japan's Kornan tra'e, though he does not thi k that the total amount of commerce between the two countries could be made to exceed 7 or 8 million yes a year, because of the comparative poverly of the Koreans. The Japanese should strive to have Kerea's resources opened up and

Speaking of the future of Japan's trade with China, Mr. Okoshi had three propositions to make, namely, (a) that the relations of Ispanese merchants, engaged in Chinese commerce be made more cordial, an as to renvide egefast compellion between them : (8) to make more extensive use of the coast of the Yangise River for purposes of commerce; and and, to own factories and immovable property in
